LFH Case No. 099

Janesville Wisconsin
March 14th. 1875.

Dear Ettie:

I have neglected you, am sorry consequently command you to forgive me. I am home as you will see by this letter came last Thursday and you may sin again I scolded some when you went home without coming to see me once. Ira and Mary, Hattie, Horace, and Peter were here a few minutes Yesterday. Ada I think is some better, but Ettie I fear she will never be well: her sickness seems like the consumption. Mother does not think it is. I have very much to tell you but think I will not write it. I want to come out there to the Institute next week..[1] If the roads are not impassable. I do not know as I can come unless I do come to the Inst. I hope you will be glad to see me Ettie.

Now I will not write very much for there is a prospect of my seeing you so soon.

I hear strange reports_____ of the fulfillment of the Prince’s Dreams. I trimble to think that the dove is soon, too soon to be gathered home. (I presume you notice these marks are a little crooked.)

I think you may look for one some time next week. I must investigate matters a little I see plainly (that women is designing critters, and man was made to mourn). Well I can not write any more to you for, I must write three other letters to day

End of letter, no signature attached.

1 In a 11 March 1876 letter from Ira Flagler to Juliette, he mentions an “institute” that he will not be able to attend with Ettie. See: 1876 3 11 Letr. Ira P. Flagler to Juliette A.E.Flagler.lwp.

LFH Case No. 099. 14 March 1875 letter, "E".[2] (Emma Thayer female friend of Juliette), Janesville, Wisconsin to Juliette A.E. Flagler, Janesville (?), Wisconsin. Data: no Env.; 5 x 8 in; embossed with "Congress" logo; blue-lined paper; 1 letter sheet; cursive; purple ink; wotim;.[3] cotton-fibre; doc. cond. good; legibility good; 1 date, 1 author; per. formal heading, greeting, complimentary close; no. Sig. line; written Sunday. This letter by "E" begins with an apology for not writing to Ettie and then scolds Juliette for not seeing E when she went home. E mentions friends that visited her on Saturday, including Ira Flagler, Ettie's brother, and then tells Ettie that "Ada" (a mutual friend) is "some better" but she fears that she "seems like the consumption" and will never be well. E's mother doesn't think she has consumption. E states that she has lots to tell Ettie but won't write it, anticipating a visit to the "Institute" next week if "the roads are not impassable." In her second paragraph E mentions hearing "strange reports" of the "fulfillment of the Prince's Dreams." No doubt an allusion either to a dream experienced either by E or Ettie, or some literary or religious symbolism mutually shared by both of them. E emphasizes her feeling in the very next line: "I trimble to think that the dove is soon, too soon to be gathered home. (I presume you notice these marks are a little crooked.)" In her final paragraph she makes what appears to be a philosophical reflection when she states "I see plainly (that women is designing critters, and man was made to mourn)." She ends her missive stating she can't write anymore to Ettie because she has three other letters to write. See: Emma J. Thayer wrote eight letters to Juliette A. E. Flagler: 1872 4 9 Letr. Emma Thayer to Juliaette A.E. Flagler, 061; 1873 12 3 Letr. Emma Thayer To Juliaette A.E. Flagler, 62; 1874 9 16 Letter - 'E' Emma Thayer To Juliaette A. E. Flagler, 078; *1875 2 22 Letr. 2 A comparison of calligraphy between a letter written by "E" to Juliette in 16 Sept. 1874 and the missive above, shows strong similarities in ink used, syntax, letter structure and tone. See: 1874 9 16 Letr. 'E' to Juliette A.E. Flagler, #78.
